

Rhodes, Greece. Funds filtered through from an "American intelligence agency" last month provided a delightful eight-day visit to the fabled island of Rhodes for "representatives" of 42 countries, mostly of Asia and Africa, under the nominal auspices of the Congress for Cultural Freedom. To answer the "anti-imperialist" complaints of the Afro-Asian guests, there were on hand such Western stalwarts of the CIA-nourished Left as: John Strachey, British Labor Party leader and avowed Marxist; Gunnar Myrdal, famed collectivist of Scandinavia and the UN, instructor to the U.S. in racial and economic problems; Professor Edward Shils of Chicago, chairman of congressional investigating committee, defender of the right of Communists to teach in U.S. universities; Robert Maynard (Fund for the Republic) Hutchins; and the latest recruit to this international circuit, John Kenneth (Affluent Society) Gallbraith.
